

Spanning seal skins and potlatches, Black and white, Germany and America, Margaret Mead and Zora Neale Hurston, and the 1893 Chicago Columbian Exposition to World War II, Alan McGowan's gripping biography of Franz Boas is also a history of anthropology and the struggle of Western science to understand and serve the public interest.

Jesse Ausubel, Director, Program in the Human Environment, Rockefeller University